January 9th
Rizaniño "Riz" Reyes

Container Gardening Fundamentals: Designing, Assembling and Maintaining Plants in Pots

"Riz" will demonstrate the basics of creative container plantings. Choosing a container, plant selection, unique plants, hanging baskets, vertical gardening and combinations for various conditions will be addressed. Both beginners and seasoned professionals will gather ideas for the upcoming gardening year and composing planters for year-round interest.

January 16th

Dana Kelley Bressette

Using Native Plants in Landscapes and for Restoration in the Maritime Pacific Northwest

Dana Bressette will discuss how our climate and soils create unique habitats and how to select native plants appropriate to our landscapes. Colorful slides of native trees, shrubs, groundcovers, and perennials will highlight their beauty and benefits, with notes on those that attract local wildlife, such as hummingbirds and butterflies.

January 23

Joshua Chenoweth

Vegetation Restoration in the Former Reservoirs: A Tale of Two Surfaces

Joshua Chenoweth is leading the effort to jumpstart revegetation on 800 acres of the barren landscape left after removal of two dams on the Elwha River. He will tell us how propagation, soils, invasive species, wildlife, and human effort are interacting on an unprecedented planting project.

January 30th

George Lasch

Perennials Every Garden Should Have and Making More--Perennial Propagation

George Lasch is a gardener at heart and loves to connect plants and people. His slide lecture features his opinions and helpful tips on "good perennials" and some "not so good perennials." He will also demonstrate perennial propagation from cuttings, seeds and division.

February 6th

Janine Anderson

Southern Beauties: Beyond Hebe and Phormium

Have hebes and New Zealand flax let you down? Plants from New Zealand, Australia, and other Southern Hemisphere countries can breathe fresh air into tired Northwest landscapes. Janine Anderson will cover the choicest selections from the "Down Unders," their uses and availability, drought tolerance, attractiveness to birds, winter interest, and a few caveats.

February 13th

Janet Aubin

Organic Blueberries at Finnriver Farm

Finnriver Farm is known for growing exquisite blueberries. Janet Aubin will discuss the organic management system for Finnriver's two acre mature field, focusing on pest and disease control. She will also outline the process for planting a new field, which is currently underway.
