January 11 Jim Ullrich
Developing Backyard Sanctuaries For Orchard Mason Bees

This is a hands-on presentation showing bees, housing and accessories, and focusing on first-quarter maintenance, with a sprinkling of birding included. Attendees are encouraged to bring their questions and current bee housing if they have concerns or questions from their backyard.

January 18 Christine McCall
Successful Residential Gardens—Even in Deer Country

A survey of behaviorally-based peaceful ways to deter garden damage by local deer. We want to reach for magnificence and productivity in the garden while recognizing the needs and rights of our wildlife.

We'll assess costs and benefits of a wide range of techniques and products intended to solve chronic deer trespasses in residential gardens.

January 25 Donna Beaton
Horticultural Therapy: Yes, It Is a Real Thing

Who hasn't said, "Gardening is my therapy"? Art or Music Therapy is widely recognized, but Horticultural Therapy has a much longer history. The use of gardening and nature activities can achieve defined goals in medical, mental health, and vocational settings. On a more personal level, we can use gardening to foster wellness in even the most trying situations.

February 1 Karen Chapman
Designing with Foliage First

Learn three steps to transform your containers from frumpy to fabulous. With ideas for budgets and gardens of all sizes, you will quickly gain the confidence and knowledge to transform your landscape into a cohesive series of eye-catching scenes using a variety of elements as focal points, each with a strategic foliage framework.

February 8 Robin Fitch
What to Expect with Climate Change: Adapting your Yard to Cope with Today's Pacific Northwest Climate

Changing climate regimes pose challenges to Pacific Northwest yards, gardens, and forests. Robin will discuss climate projections for the Olympic Peninsula, the likely effects of climate change on our ecosystems, and adaptation ideas that might improve resilience for both small and larger scale properties.

February 15 Sue Goetz
The Herb Lovers' Garden

Herbs for landscaping, fragrance, healing, edible flowers, seasoning and cut flowers: What is the best oregano variety for cut flowers? Use fennel to attract butterflies, or parsley as a flower border? Discover something new and useful about the herbs in your garden. Start with their beauty in the landscape and then discover ways to use them.
